

"The Latins had a singular expression, vivere vitam, which was passed on to modern romance languages as vivre sa vie, vivere la propria vita [live one's own life]. The full transitive force of the verb "vivere" has to be restored here; a force, however that does not take on an object (this is the paradox!), but, so to speak, has no object other than life itself. Life here is a possibility, a potentiality that never exhausts itself in biographical facts and events, since it has no object other than itself. It is an absolute immanence that nevertheless moves and lives.

[Take your time: the seven pillars of a Slow Thought manifesto – Vincenzo Di Nicola | Aeon Essays]"(<https://ift.tt/2FkXg1>)

---

"Badiou's anti-philosophers include Paul of Tarsus, Friedrich Nietzsche, Sigmund Freud and his follower Lacan, and Wittgenstein."

Take your time: the seven pillars of a Slow Thought manifesto – Vincenzo Di Nicola | Aeon Essays

•